Background Information

State the nature and purpose of the proposed program, including target audience and centrality to institutional mission. (1500 characters)

Winthrop University has offered the Bachelor of Science degree in Family and Consumer Sciences (FACS), a non-teacher certification degree program, for many years. This proposal is to overhaul the existing program into a Bachelor of Science degree in Human Development and Family Studies. The current program is listed under the Family and Consumer Sciences Education degree CIP code and this proposal will request a CIP in Human Development and Family Studies. The current B.S. in FACS program is not under a professional accrediting body beyond the institutional regional accrediting body, SACSCOC. However, after research and discussions with representatives from the National Council on Family Relations (NCFR), it was determined that by adding one new course, shifting a few existing courses, and moving the program to a B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies with a new CIP code, it would meet the ten family life education content areas and, therefore, be nationally recognized by NCFR. The additional benefit of receiving NCFR national recognition is that program completers would qualify for the national credential provided by NCFR, Certified Family Life Educator (CFLE). This national program recognition would be the first in S.C. Currently, there are only 130 CFLE approved institutions across the U.S. and Canada. Please note that the CFLE credential is not classified as a license, but an enhancement to the degree and employment potential.

Redesigning this degree program to meet NCFR guidelines meets the mission of Winthrop University to “provide personalized and challenging undergraduate, graduate, and continuing professional education programs of national caliber within a context dedicated to public service to the nation and to the State of South Carolina.”

The target audience for this redesigned degree program consists of the currently enrolled 97 B.S. in Family and Consumer Sciences students as well as prospective students seeking a career path in working with individuals and families across a variety of employment opportunities.

List the program objectives. (2000 characters)

The purpose of the B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies is to prepare graduates for careers in human and consumer service-oriented agencies where children and families are the focus. The B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies is a strong interdisciplinary program that includes coursework that spans the ten Family Life Education Content Areas (see below) established by the National Council on Family Relations (NCFR). The program is designed with an ecological framework in mind. Individuals and families are part of a larger system and the interaction within the systems impact who we are. Under this national umbrella, graduates of the B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies are eligible to receive Certified Family Life Educator certification, a national credential recognized by many employers.

Through a minimum of 40 hours of professional core coursework, the choice of one of three cognate areas of focus (Adolescent Studies, Consumer Studies, and Early Childhood Studies) as well as the opportunity to acquire an optional minor, graduates are equipped with knowledge and experience across content areas in child development, family relations, nutrition, human sexuality, interpersonal relationships, professional ethics and practice, and family law and practice.

NCFR Ten Family Life Education Content Area:

1. Families and Individuals in Societal Contexts
2. Internal Dynamics of Families
3. Human Growth and Development across the Lifespan
4. Human Sexuality
5. Interpersonal Relationships
6. Family Resource Management
7. Parent Education and Guidance
8. Family Law and Public Policy
9. Professional Ethics and Practice
10. Family Life Education Methodology

HDFS degree candidates will:

1. demonstrate an understanding of the complexity of human and family development across the life span in diverse contexts;
2. apply the principles of building collaborations and partnerships by developing, implementing, and critiquing family life programs that support the well-being of individuals, families, and communities;
3. analyze and evaluate research and contextual factors affecting the well-being of children and families in diverse contexts;
4. display ethical, practical, and professional competence in a clinical/field experience;
5. integrate concepts of global interdependence as they relate to individuals, families, consumers, and communities to their areas of specialization; and
6. Understand and apply technologies related to resource development and sustainability, and the impact of those concepts on human environments.

Assessment of Need

Provide an assessment of the need for the program for the institution, the state, the region, and beyond, if applicable. (1500 characters)

Winthrop University has graduated 117 Family and Consumer Sciences majors from 2010 – 2014. With steadily rising enrollment numbers in this program, it is predicted that, with the proposed changes, even more students will be attracted to this program and its pending certification option for completers. Enrollment numbers over the past four years have increased from 69 to 97; therefore, demonstrating a growing interest and need for this career preparation field. With collaborations in coursework across six departments (business, nutrition, physical education - sport and human performance, psychology, sociology, and social work), an increase in visibility across campus is anticipated.

The CFLE credential recognizes that the designee has met industry standards for effective practice. Social work and human services have standards that guide practitioners. CFLE provides a set of ethical standards, content, and skills that enables practitioners to engage in prevention education and family services. Anyone can claim that they are life coaches and family service professionals, the CFLE credential gives students in this field the opportunity to have national standards of practice. Therefore, having this additional credential provides a normed assurance to potential employers of each graduate's qualifications and preparation [<https://www.ncfr.org/cfle-certification/what-family-life-education/where-are-family-life-educators-employed>].

Surveys and research conducted by various national and governmental organizations (Centers for Disease Control-Youth Risk Behavior Survey, State and County Health Rankings, Justice Bureau<sup>1</sup>) show that the state of South Carolina continues to struggle with high rates of interpersonal violence, children in poverty, teen pregnancy, poor mental health, and substance abuse. Efforts of prevention are central for reducing or eliminating social challenges described above. The B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies program and the Certified Family Life Educator credential prepares students to engage in preventative care. Whereas social work and psychology focus on intervention, B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies will focus on education and prevention that can lead to cost-savings for the state and the country. The federal government has also invested in quality early childhood care and expects that the early intervention will lead to fewer problems later in life. The B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies early childhood concentration provides graduates with these necessary skills.

Research shows that graduates from the B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies can seek employment in general social work and human services, education, child development, advocacy and non-profit, business, health industry, and research.

Provide additional information regarding anticipated employment opportunities for graduates. (1000 characters)

Program graduates will be qualified to work in various positions with publicly funded, private, and charitable agencies and organizations in areas such as adoption, child and family services, at-risk youth, and consumer services. In addition to fulfilling the needs for the aforementioned positions, it is possible for graduates to pursue a teaching position in the critical needs area of Family and Consumer Sciences through an alternative certification program. In S.C., graduates would pursue alternative certification through the Program of Alternative Certification for Educators (PACE) offered through the S.C. Department of Education.

According to the Center for Educator Recruitment, Retention, and Advancement (CERRA), there is one unfilled position available for the 2015-2016 school year. CERRA, accessed on 1/28/2016, is not showing any openings for the 2016-2017 school year; however, district postings typically appear in March.

Provide supporting evidence of anticipated employment opportunities for graduates, including a statement that clearly articulates what the program prepares graduates to do, any documented citations that suggests a correlation between this program and future employment, and other relevant information. Description of the Program

*Note: The current program consistently maintains an overall enrollment between 90-100 students. The majority of these students enter the program as an internal transfer – change of major student. Once the program is fully CHE approved and NCFR recognized and renamed as a BS in HDFFS, the department and program will advertise this unique career path degree program through its 40+ K-12 partnership schools and districts, social media, admissions office, website, conferences, etc. with an expected acquisition of approximately 10-15 new freshman recruits into the program. Therefore, we conservatively anticipate maintaining an overall enrollment of 110 students.

Budget Justification

Provide a brief explanation for the other new costs and any special sources of financing (state funding, reallocation of existing funds, federal funding, or other funding) identified in the Financial Support table. (1000 characters)

Note: Institutions need to complete this budget justification only if any other new costs, state funding, reallocation of existing funds, federal funding, or other funding are included in the Financial Support table.

No additional new costs or special sources of financing are required. Since this is a restructuring of an existing program, program administration, faculty salaries, and most costs will all be funded at existing levels. The small potential increase in enrollment will generate fees to be used toward supplies and materials.

The tuition funding represents the increase in tuition for the anticipated 13 additional students in the program from the current enrollment level as noted in the projected enrollment table on page 8, using the current tuition rate for in-state students. Program-specific fees were calculated using an $110 average course fees per new student in this program. These course fees support an inventory assessment formally administered through the Winthrop Office of Career and Civic Engagement in the course Career Education and Professional Ethics, consumable materials in the course Product Construction and Design, and a t-shirt and name badge provided in the course Family Life Education that affords students the opportunity to plan and implement a mini-program in local agency.

Evaluation and Assessment

Programmatic Assessment: Provide an outline of how the proposed program will be evaluated, including any plans to track employment. Identify assessment tools or software used in the evaluation. Explain how assessment data will be used. (3000 characters)

Each year program enrollment, retention, and graduation data are reviewed as part of the institution's assessment system. Each spring, all degree programs at Winthrop University submit a Program Assessment Report. This report is then reviewed by the College of Education Unit Assessment Committee and the results reported to members of the College of Education Dean's Council. All assessment reports are uploaded in Winthrop University's Online Assessment Report System (OARS) electronic database.

The six identified key assessments for the B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies program provided in the next section will be entered and stored in LiveText. These data will be included in the aforementioned annual Program Assessment Report and reviewed annually by the College of Education Unit Assessment Committee and members of the College of Education Dean's Council.

Lastly, beginning Spring 2018, the program will track employment data through the Center for Career and Civic engagement/ALUMNI at Winthrop University.

Additionally, the program will track the number of students certified through NCFR and maintain a listserv for continued communication and updates.
